

Robert R. Janes Award for Social Responsibility

Lougheed House

Engaging deeply with its communities, Lougheed House has gone beyond the typical narrative of an historic house to create exciting and unique visitor experiences that tell the lesser-known stories of Calgary. Embracing, challenging, and educating the communities it serves, and evolving alongside them, Lougheed House exemplifies the active role museums can take alongside their diverse community partners in shaping the narrative of a dynamic Alberta and integrating social responsibility into all aspects of museum practice.

Left, gardening volunteers at Lougheed House; top right, Métis veteran Sergeant Major George Pambrun, Retired, at the raising of the Métis flag at the Lougheed House Garden Festival; bottom right, posing for the photo booth during Outliers: Queer History in Calgary.

“Long-term, we aspire to be a place where all Calgarians can see themselves ... to tell our city’s history through the diverse stories and perspectives of the people who made this place.”

– Kirstin Evenden, Executive Director, Lougheed House